United States District Court Judge Karen E. Schreier and law clerk Marcus Miller led approximately 40 students in a simulated, hands-on mock trial experience at the Sioux Falls, South Dakota, courthouse. The event, held on June 26, 2024, was based upon a case problem Marcus Miller wrote about a high school student allegedly distributing prescription drugs at a party. With the assistance of attorneys and legal interns from the United States Attorneys Office and interns from Judge Schreier's chambers, the students spent roughly two hours drafting their respective parts and preparing to try the case.

The students took on various roles in a court proceeding and performed opening statements, direct and cross examinations, and closing arguments in front of Judge Schreier. The mock trial was part of a larger summer camp offered by the United States Attorneys Office giving students exposure to the criminal justice system and the federal courts.

"This is an event that would have been very helpful to have had when I was in high school and trying to figure out what I wanted to do. I know that these students will be better off because of this opportunity."
